

Foxy!

Contributed by Jenny
Tuesday, 19 May 2009

The wooded hill behind us sustains of vast array of life from all types of birdies including a great horned owl who likes to hoot at 3 a.m., bunnies, the occasional housecat slinking along the ridge no doubt in pursuit of birdies and bunnies, a random deer who made it on the site several months ago, unfortunately but highly likely there are snakes, spiders and bugs, and now a fox! Several weeks ago I caught sight of him and today I caught him on film. Ok, so the pictures are definitely not the best and they do tend to hearken to the low-quality and barely believable Sasquatch pictures and video that people submit, but if you do look closely and squint really hard you can tell it's a fox! Also I had my first visit from a red-bellied woodpecker recently and was able to catch some pictures of him too. Enjoy the pictures!